were the speakers. Henry Weissman was ex-pected, but was unable to be present.

Mr. Spaler's speech consisted of his own personal reasons for supporting Mr. Low and the Citizens Arthur J. Morgan at 11 o'clock yesterday morning in the Church of St. Vincent Ferrer, Lexingtonave, and Sixty-sixth-st. Because of a recent death in the bridegroom's family, the invitations to the Union. Among these he mentioned the placing of labor men on the Executive Committee of the Citizens Union, its position regarding public fran-chises, its advocating short hours and living wages ceremony and breakfast were limited to the mem-bers of the two families. The Rev. John J. Hughes, of the Church of St. Paul the Apostle, assisted by on public works, and the fact that Mr. Low seemed the Rev. "Another disadvantage," he added, "though it is no discredit to him, is the excise legislation passed by the Republicans. This is so unpopular with the foreign population of the city that even with two-thirds of the Republican vote Tracy could not win, while Mr. Low could do so with half, as he is the only candidate on which all the anti-Tammany elements can unite."

There was some informal discussion during the meeting, and one of the women took occasion to call attention to Mr. Low's pure American blood. She had found, she sold, that one of his ancestors was a Brewster, who came over in the Mayflower, and she thought they ought to remember this and say it every time they got a chance. Then, following the tactics of some male politicians, she expressed her suspicion of Van Wyck's distinguished descent, saying that so far from being a Knicker-bocker, he was not even a New-Yorker, but came from an ordinary North Carolina family. She asserted further, that his morals were shady, and his associations impossible, but she did not seem to have the sympathy of her audience, for the discussion was not continued.

Before the meeting closed Mrs. Goddard urged those present to exert every particle of influence they had between now and November 2.

"Don't think of anything else," she said. "Leave your shopping till afterward, and your houses as mine is—in a pickle—and don't take time for anything but to sleep and say your prayers night and morning for our success; for the great thing now is to convince those wavering cowards who want to be on the winning side, whichever the winning side is."

known actors and artists furnishing the programme. A house filled to overflowing with people must have filled the hearts of the leaguers to overflowing with joy. Almost every seat was taken, and the boxes held gay parties of members and their friends. After the overture, "William Tell," by the Fifth Avenue Theatre orchestra, the programme was opened by Sol Smith Russell in Charles E. Lewis's sketch, "A Bachelor's Supper," Mr. Russell, assisted by William Seymour, presenting the act called "Mr. Valentine's Christmas." Pathos was the keynote throughout the act, brightened faintly by the quaint and gentle humor of Clem, the devoted negro servant. The close was tragic in its intensity, eyes grew misty, and the use was strangely still.

The New-York String Quartet, composed of Eugen Boegner, first violin; Josef Knect, second vio-lin; Karl Schaefer, viola, and Felice Bouche, 'cello, gave the second number—an andante and an onded with a charming encore, repeating the last composition.

Dan Daly's funny songs captured the audience, and he was recalled again and again. No more solemn-looking source could ever send forth more evident and contradictory absurdity, and a bright and enthusiastic league member remarked audibly, Burr McIntosh was the only man in this feminine affair, and he, as the disgusted and patience-tried Sheriff, played successfully his part. The part of Mrs. Dingley, foreman of the jury, was taken by Miss Cora Tanner, assisted by a much-needed gavel, and the remain of the dramatis personae was as follows: Miss Skinner, Miss Mary Shaw; Miss Sharp, Miss Laura Skinner, Miss Mary Shaw; Miss Sharp, Miss Laura Burt; Mrs. Fairly, Miss Marguerite St. John; Mrs. Faint, Miss Annie Warrington; Mrs. Dyer, Mmc. As this Jury of the future filed gayly into the room the audience saw some exceedingly handsome gowns, the latest thing in picturesque hats and an array of Professional League tatent that won ingrand and prolonged appliance. Shut up in the jury-room by the long-suffering Sheriff, these women furymen fell to discussing the ways and dress of their sister-jurors; the evils of teething and the remedies therefor; the most approved recipe for getting the best results with "four eggs, not three," as a domestic jurywoman emphasized; the changing of cooks and the great yet necessary evil of modern of cooks and the great yet necessary evil of modern the defendant and the plaintiff that a clear view of this was utterly impossible.

From opening to finish the sketch was absurdly amusing, and the majesty of the law was never more cleverly and subtly burlesqued. The men in the audience—and their name was legion—enjoyed it to the utmost.

There were a number of box parties, among them being Miss Lotia Crabtree and Mrs. Crabtree and friends. Mrs. Edwin Knowles, Mrs. McAuley, and other Professional League members, Mrs. Delmaco and Mme. Pott. Mrs. Gref and Mrs. Mrs. Delmaco and Mme. Pott. Mrs. Gref and Mrs. Hardy, Mary Scott Rowland and a party of friends, Mrs. John Fox and Mrs. A M. Palmer.

Mrs. Palmer, who is the president of the League, looked unusually handsome in a gown of black broade silk and a jot toque. She carried one large American Beauty rose. Through the generosity of Mr. Knowles, the manager, and Richard Mansfield the theatre was placed at the disposal of the League free of charge, a courtesy the members will ever treasure and appreciate. Much of the success of the benefit is due to the earnest efforts of individual members, among whom may be mentioned Mrs. Edwin Knowles and Miss Mary Shaw.

President-General of the T. S. S.: A kind woman sent some copies of The Tribune to me, and, no-ticing there was a Sunshine Society, I would like to be one of its members. I am an invalid of thirto be one of its members. I am an invalid of thirty-six long, long, weary years of great suffering. For twenty-eight years I could not walk. My friends who cared for me have all passed to the Great Beyond, where there is no pain, no sorrow, no death. Five coffins were brought into our house in one chart worth, and fine of the four house. in one short month, and five of the family were carried out. My only sister was buried on Monday, and my dear mother died that same night. Monday, and my dear mother died that same night.

Oh! you cannot realize the sorrow of my poor heart at that time! Now I have my home with strangers. Long-continued sickness and large doctors bills Long-continued sickness and large doctors bills have left me poor and needy and so lonely! My life is very sad, but I try to bear patiently and bravely the cross He has given me. Perhaps when the clouds are rolled away I will know why I am left as I am. I send a little verse for the column:

My languishing head will soon be at rest, its aching and thinking will soon be o'er; My quiet, immovable breast Shall be heaved by affliction no more. I will be thankful for silk pleces or any little temembrances. Truly cours, DORCAS H. ANDERSON.

was extended by the society both to the donor and to her ambassador.

The most interesting report of the day was that of the legal adviser, Mrs. Carpenter. Mrs. Carpenter said that, finding the services of a notary public frequently necessary in the society, she had become one herself and was prepared to give her services free of charge in all matters that might require them. She also said that since giving her last report she had attained her majority, having been admitted to the bar last June.

When the report of the Press Committee was called for and it was found that the chairman, Mrs. Jane Fierce, was absent, Mrs. Slade said such a thing as the absence of Mrs. Pierce from her post had never before been heard of in the society. The remark elicited enthusiastic applause from the audience.

The remark elicited enthusiastic applause from the audience.

The names of twenty-two new members were proposed, and secured the approval of the society. The meeting was followed by a musical programme. There were vocal solos by Miss Florence Wilcox, Miss Emma Wing and Miss Kathryn Krymer, piano solos by Miss Patience Read, violin solos by little Henrietta Bach, and a monologue called 'The Village Seamstress' by Miss May Browning Mrs. Madison C. Peters accompanied Miss Krymer, and Miss Alice Keating accompanied Miss Wilcox.

Among those present at the meeting and musical were Mrs. G. M. Donaldson, Mrs. J. W. Shepard, Mrs. H. B. Wilson, Mrs. J. S. Van Sickle, Mrs. A. S. Nye, Mrs. C. S. Sedgewick, Mrs. Benjamin Kenyon, Mrs. Paul A. Meyrowitz, Mrs. George T. Studwell, Mrs. G. Gaines, Mrs. S. E. Bourne, Miss Suton, Mrs. Lowell Talbot, Miss Slade and Mrs. Charles Niebuhr.

At the Heckla Club, No. 59 Columbus-ave, abuilding belonging to the Church of St. Paul, a fair, which has been organized entirely by a band of little Cuban girls, will be opened to-day. The children formed a club a short time since, call it "Las dos Banderas," which means, Flags." The Cuban and the American National ensigns are, of course, the banners thus honored. They will be used as decorations in many odd and pretty ways about the hall, where an exhibition of all sorts of articles will invite custom.

The design of the fair is to raise money for Cuba spite of what Spain offers and declares shall be spite of what Spain offers and declares shall be granted the insurgents, every Cuban who expresses an opinion in public says that only complete independence will satisfy the country, and that war will not cease until it is won. The children who are active in carrying on the work of the fair are all patriots. They nearly all belong to the club, "The Two Flags," of which the president is Maria Alvarez; treasurer, Dolores Castillo; secretary, Leopoldina Trustillo. Isabel Cabrera, Rosa Gramonte and Naul Castillo are chalirmen of committees. There are forty members in all.

The children hope that, as they have prepared many things which will make appropriate gifts for the holiday season, their tables will be well patronized. The fair will continue to-day and to-morrow afternoon and evening. A Cuban country dance will be one of the special attractions.
